

Be part of the statewide organization that represents a majority of Delaware’s architectural professionals as an Allied Member of AIA Delaware. Through government advocacy and communication programs, AIA Delaware is at the forefront of influencing the profession and keeping industry professionals in the know.

What Is An Allied Member?

Allied Members are individuals or companies outside traditional architectural practice but involved in activities allied to the field. They have an established professional reputation and include engineers, planners, landscape architects, builders, construction and facility managers. Allied members also include those employed by companies in the construction industry who are engaged in research, design, development, testing, manufacturing, distribution or training. Individuals must not be eligible otherwise for membership in AIA Delaware.

Why Should You Become An Allied Member?

- * To show your support for Delaware’s architecture profession and be connected to an influential organization
- * To support the enhancement of communication among building industry professionals
- * To participate in networking opportunities and build relationships with members
- * To have access to insight not available elsewhere
- * To help shape architecture and the built environment through legislation and policy making
- * To help promote and sustain industry standards and best practices
- * To enable research, joint educational opportunities, and cooperative public programs on subjects of mutual interest
- * To join with colleagues to accomplish more collectively than be accomplished individually
